This year the youngster spent the day gaz-ing solemnly from her father's win-dow, and dined on questionable bis-cuits instead of a candled cake. Pauline, the oldest daughter, is at the Gardner school in New York, eagerly awalting news by wire and post of the quartet who are ready to defend themselves against an army.

Mr. Hudson published a Spanish edition of the Herald during the ms revolution, but the paper was sup-pressed. Work stopped last week in pressed. Work stopped last week in the big building, the Sunday paper being the last one issued.

Mrs. Hudson's letter showed how lightly the Americans had considered lightly the Americans had considered the possibility of a revolution, and how suddenly the fighting began. The first part described golf, tennis, weekend parties, and festivities planned for the forthcoming month. A couple of days elapsed; then came the curt statement. "We are in the midst of a real revolution,"—and butter and eggs were not to be had.

The "Heraldo" office is half a doz en blocks from the American legation it would be possible, under extraordin-ary circumstances, to escape by roof. The legation has, of course, prepared

Under the artistic eye of the Hon. Mrs. Patricia Street, of Australia, the multi-colored marchers will be ar-ranged into one long color scheme that will dim the glories of the rainbow. Miss Inez Milholland, of New York, who will lead the procession on horse-back will be clad in yellow and behind her will troop fifty ushers in pale blue and gold. After them will come women in gowns of variegated hue represent-ing the native dress of the four countries that have given the ballot to women -Norway, Finland, New Zea-land and Australia. Following them will march representatives of those countries which have granted only gary and Belgium.

Women representing other nations, characteristically clad, will complete that portion of the parade. Women artists in pale rose, actresses in deeper rose, musicians in very deep American beauty rose, and women representing other professions and crafts, clothed in costumes ranging from light lemon to funeral black, will be arranged in the procession so that there will be no clash of color. At least five of the Democratic plat-form policies were under consideration in the house this week. They were: Minimum wage for wemen. Fee and salary bill. Board of correction bill. Massachusatte ballet law

Massachusetts ballot law. Maximum hour for women bill. In addition to these measures, sev eral bills close to the hearts of the administration leaders were consider-They were:

Waggener's corporation tax bill.
Miller's bill abelishing deputy oil

County courts bill.

On the minimum wage for women bill and its companion, the maximum hour bill, the house made good and redeemed another pledge. Both bills were passed. The house showed its good nature and willing to go a bit suffrage—Sweden, Denmark, out of the way to fulfil a promise, Great Britain, Austria-Hun- when it accepted the senate amendment regarding educational qualifications which the senate had injected into the Massachusetts ballot law. When that bill came back from the conference committee with the recom-niendation that it be passed with the senate amendment attached, the house voted to pass the bill in that form. Their vote took the very breath out of the conservative senate, which promptly backed up and rejected the bill with its own amendments, then reconsidered and passed the bill. So reconsidered and passed the bill. So Kansas is next year to try a brand new ballot law.

Defeat County Courts Bill. But the county courts bill was more than the house could swallow. It wanted to be good natured and give its friends a boost, but when the bill creating a county court and compelling the probate judge to recognize a copy of Blackstone from the four-teenth edition of an unabridged dictionary, it called a halt and refused to pass such a law.

The oil bill met with better success.

Miller of Ottawa, offered a measure which killed off a whole army of deputy oil inspectors and saved the state $20,000 a year. So the house smiled and put the bill across by a big majority.

Passed Corporation Tax. There was doubt and fear as to the things which would happen to the corporation tax bill in the house. That fear and trembling was without cause or justification. Even Jensen of Lyon, who is interested in corporations, thought it was a good thing since the administration wanted it. And he voted with the other Democrats to put measure that went through the house without trouble. It was the Howe bill to create a board of correction to supervise the penal institutions. The measure, which calls for the creation of a board of three members appointed by the governor, was opposed by but two of the house members on final roll call.
